Opening of River Navigation-Political-Pro-Correspondence of The Tribune

MONTHEAL, Friday, April 26 the steambeats have begun to run for the season between this city and Quebec. The first voyage sume no person who hears of his conduct will ever was made yesterday. We shall probably have some sea going craft in our barbor to day.

In other respects we have nothing stirring of much importance. In politics all await the opening of the session, which is expected to be stormy I understand that a strong feeling exists among a portion of the Ministerialists residing in this part of the country against the removal of the seat of government, and especially the extravagant wastedness of the migratory system. An attack on the Government on this ground may therefore be expected, but these persons have shown themselves so servile before, that their threats are not very

The Provincial Government has just entered upon mother of the functions hitherto exercised by the colonial officer, by the appointment of a Mr. Bouthelfier to the head of the Customs Department in this port : thus imperial control is gradually but surely vanishing. The whole department will in a few weeks be formally turned over to the Provincial authorities, and reconstituted as a Provin cial institution; the Thames st. house only keep cal institution, the Thames at house only keeping a separate establishment here by way of a hominal retention of possession called the "controllership of navigation laws"—laws which have virtually ceased to exist. The Post-office will go next—it is said in October—and then I hardly see what patronage John Bull will have left, except the right to send a powerless Governor to be the tool of our factions. The transfer of authority is to be followed by a creat colority. be followed by a great reduction in cost, the sain ries for the future being reduced to £3,220, instead

This statement they believe the companion of the companion shows that considerable expectation has provailed relative to the decrease of our population for though there has undoubtedly been a considerable decrease since 1846, it is impossible to believe that the increase between 1844 and 1846 was so great as to admit of 10,000 or even 167,000 people, as some said, abandoning the city, and yet leaving a sufficient number to show an increase of nearly 1,000 four years later.
